emphasising the increasing importance of occupational safety and health in India's current economic environment.

"With above-average economic growth and a rising income of US$ 5,410 GNP per capita there is increasing focus on the aspects of safe and healthy workplaces among relevant stakeholders. With its growth potential India is an interesting market for international suppliers of protective equipment. At the same time, many international companies run production sites in India and expect the customary safety standards and regulations for technical safety at work to be expanded further. This dynamic environment is the point of departure for the Occupational Safety + Health Exhibition INOS+H Expo which offers a unique industry platform for experts, explains Werner M. Dornscheidt, President & CEO of Messe Düsseldorf GmbH, and goes on to say: "The Düsseldorf A+A, the world's leading trade fair and congress for Safety, Security and Health at Work is extending its portfolio abroad to include INOS+H Expo and thereby opens up new markets for Indian exhibitors as well as export-oriented companies."

INOS+H Expo especially addresses safety engineers, safety experts and officers as well as plant managers and entrepreneurs. It also targets works doctors, industrial physicians but also supervisory bodies, government and mutual indemnity organisations.

Awaiting trade visitors will be a wide range of topics covered both at INOS+H Expo and the concurrently held INTERNATIONAL VISION ZERO CONFERENCE on OSH, which disseminates expert knowledge by way of lectures and seminars. Dovetailing the trade fair with the conference benefits visitors and exhibitors by providing ample opportunities for conversations and networking. Some 1,500 conference delegates are expected.
